

Treatment of the canine glaucoma

Abstract

The goals of this work were to study the different options in the treatment of the canine glaucoma, as well as to search the best treatment option to each case. The study bases are a large amount of bibliography research and the study of several clinical cases.

Through all this work I've mentioned the several medical and surgical options in the treatment of the canine glaucoma. Beyond that, I've mentioned the possible use of alternative medicines like acupuncture. There's a large variety in what refers to the medical treatment of the canine glaucoma, with a big variety of possible strategies to choose and lot's of medicines to use. The selection of the treatment has bases in the indications, adverse effects and secondary effects of the various medicines and the economical possibilities of the owner. The economical factor is, most of the times, very important in the treatment option to choose. In spite of all the options that are already in use, there are several options that still are being studied and that in a near future may be able to be used in the treatment of this disease. When the medical options fail, there still are several surgical options that can be used to solve this problem.

Key words: glaucoma, treatment, dog